IBM is a household name; seller of eponymous computer hardware and provider of world-class consulting services.

Their history dates back to 1911, where they got their start in the same place their corporate office sits today.

When The Switzer Group, an internationally acclaimed interior design and architecture firm, was tasked with leading the renovation of IBM corporate offices, they turned to FSC for the 3D rendering and animation needs.

FSC took the initial design and developed a 3D model, allowing the viewer to conduct a virtual walkthrough of the space in four different layouts and multiple color schemes.

By nature this work requires extreme attention to detail and minimal tolerances.

Unlike a more typical engagement where FSC will collaborate with the client, this work was performed solely in-house and delivered as a standalone product.

This is great example of the limitless capabilities of FSC. On-site, in-house, placements, you name it; FSC can do anything in the world of architecture and engineering to the highest standard available in the industry.
