FSC was privileged to join the United States Agency for International Development (USAID), and Bechtel on a major telecom and infrastructure project in Egypt.

This project presented a number of challenges, primarily that of gathering a local, regional, and expat workforce in a relatively unfamiliar environment, and creating on-the-job synthesis.

As FSC has vast experience in a variety of global regions, particularly the Middle East, it was able to leverage its' global community of A/E talent for the select few with very specific traits and skills.

The end result was the construction of all cooper cable and fiber optics assets for northeast Egypt.

The project was successful and the client was able to achieve target cost and delivery.
